- 1 Which of these best describes the experiment?
 - A Reporters around the world interviewed 1,100 people who had lost their wallets.
 - B Reporters left money and photos in the street, and watched what people did.
 - C Reporters left wallets in different places, and watched what people did.
 - D Reporters interviewed people who'd found their wallets.
- 2 How many people returned the wallet?
 - A Most people returned the wallet because they thought it would be unlucky to keep it.
 - B Most people who have families returned the wallet.
 - C People who had lost their own wallets always returned them.
 - D Only 33 per cent of people gave the wallet back.
- 3 Who is most likely to give the wallet back?
 - A A 35-year-old French man.
 - B A 40-year-old English woman.
 - C A 20-year-old German boy.
 - D A 19-year-old Scandinavian girl.
- 4 What does the text say about rich people and poor people?
 - A A poorer person would give the wallet back, because they understand the value of money.
 - B A rich person would give the wallet back, because they appreciate the value of money.
 - C A poorer person wouldn't give the wallet back, because they are greedy.
 - D A rich person would give it back because they would feel guilty keeping it.
- 5 What can we learn from this experiment?
 - A We live in a perfect world, but some people don't have good values.
 - B There isn't any hope for society because nobody has good values.
 - C We aren't perfect, but most people do the right thing.
 - D Society isn't perfect, and most people pass on bad values.
